

GENDER AND CULTURE PROMPT #1

Ten data collectors (5 male, 5 female) go to the survey area approximately 100km away from the office. Collecting data of small scale farmers in rural Bangladesh to support titling and issuance of certificate of title. The customs of the area do not allow women to talk to men in the absence of male family members. Most of the respondents are usually working in their farms during the most of the morning.

What are the things that you will put into consideration?

- What mode of transportation will be used and will data collectors travel together? Why?
- What time should data collectors leave the office to arrive at the survey area to begin data collection? Why?
- How will the data collectors approach the households? Will data collectors be going individually to collect the data or in teams?
- How do the data collectors ensure that women are involved in data collection, even if it is not appropriate to discuss with them directly?
- Do you foresee any other challenges that the data collectors must consider and prepare for?
